"ANDERSONVILLE."-This is the title of a book son to be issued by D. R. Locke, of the Toledo Blade, being a story of Andersonville and other Rebel prise ing a story of Andersonville and other score prisons, as experienced by a private soldier. There is an uprising of the loyal spirit equal to that of 1861, and there are re-unions of soldiers all over the land, to talk over past campaigns, and renew their oath of fidelity to the Union. This revival has been caused by the fact that the Rebels defeated in the war have obtained almost complete control of the Governmen and have shown that they are actuated by the san spirit that possessed them of old. As an aid to thi ing can equal the story of Adersonville revival, nothing can equal the story of Adersonville and other rebel prison pens, related by those who suffered. It is a story of brutality, cruelty, suffering, starvation, and murder. Not a County ir the United States but has families who lost members by violence in these Rebel prisons. Everybody will want this book. It contains 600 pages and about 300 filustrations, and is sold at lower rates than subscription books heretofore. It can be bought only by sub-scription. J. P. It is so near mail time, that we can't give as full an account with music furnished by Miss Carpenter. Follow ing that, Miss Eva Wood related the daring advenure of "Young Lochinvar," in so spirited a mann that several of the Severance youth resolved in their ninds to some time dash into Troy, and rival the exploits of the first mentioned youth. Miss Ida Tracy rendered "Maclain's Child" well. It is quite dramatic effort, and Miss Tracy showed that she had carefully studied and could enter into the spirit of the selection. Miss Ella Amos caused con siderable amusement by her life-like picturing of "Coquette Punished." Miss Amos has a pleasan manner, and made the whole audience her friends Curfew Must Not Ring To-night," the program said was to be given by Miss Gillie Wood. The audience gave attention from the first, and the in terest heightened till the close of what the speaker made a very interesting performance. After music, Miss Clara Byers told of "Entertaining Sister's Beau." It provoked shouts of laughter, and was "Rock of Ages." Miss Byers has a natural, unaffect ed manner, which adds so much to a speaker's por er. When she offered the chewing gum for two cents, we struggled manfully to raise the cash, bu were a hopeless bankrupt, and had to let it pass Miss Lelia Miller then recited "Creeds of the Bells.
